Without desiring to interfere in the smaller with the deliberations of the convention at rankfort to day-a breach of delicacy of which wa hope we are entirely incapable—we may yet be alliwed to say, what few who have considered the matter will deny, that the anti-Lecompton delegates are into the convention must make up the minds to do one of three things control the conven-tion, enbmit to be disgraced, or leave it. These res steps circumscribe their tuctics insurmo convention with a settled determination to e wer for, unless they have deceived themselve ore egregiously than ever a set of wire-pulle were self deceived before, THEY MAVE PACKED TH They have not deceived themselve ver, as the result will show. Whatever ma he the real proportion of Anti-Lecemptonites in th or of the State, it is certain that the proportion of their representatives in the convention to day will be all lat ridiculously small. (If course the possibility of their controling the convention is out of the question. Will they su mit to be dis raced? Will they, these orec', unshackled An Lecompton Democrate, stoop abjectly to receive the Lecompton yoke, and go home to their constituent with the badge of dishonor dinging to their neck Wil they, in the Capital of the State, at the monent that their gullant leader enters the Capital of the nation in trinmph, lower the standard he has a roudly torne at the feet of the fee, and trail it it until we see it. There remains only one stop

The fact—which a very little experience of the convention will render manfeet, if they do not fully perceive it now-that it is itse'f a cogent reason, and should be a decis me. We are at present unwilling to thick that is would not prove decisive even in the absence of all ther reasons. But other cogent reasons are not anting. Strictly theaking, political parties in Kentucky are at this moment in a state of virtual minition, verging rapidly, it is true, toward fixed nd deficite forms, but still far from that ultimate rs, by the discussions of the press, by Individual ment. tums of the people, and by none, perhaps, more decidedly than the action of public bodies like that which meets at the Capital to-day. The convention it Frankfort dues not assemble to nominate candi dates so much as to shape and define a party, may by its proceedings set a distinct and determ te organization in the field; but it certainly doe tive rather than simply munisterial. It has to look speak from the choos a Hemocrary for Ken-tucky. The convention has nothing to do with the past; it stands for the future. The Democracy weed. The true question presented to the members of the convention is wholly one of present politica affinity, not of former political association. From the very nature of the case, the surjointy, in de each delegate in at perfect liberty to follow his for, no matter what set of doctrines the majorit is the busicesmon of u here coughly a portion of the old. If these reflections ar just, or even partly just, the Auti-Lecompton men can feel under a arty ties, to stay in the convention a mome after their price ples are trampled under foot an beir bonor affronted. They are politically and morally free.

And it appears clear to us that their affinities li teide of the convention rather than in it. Wha affinities, for instance, have the Anti Lecomp erriam, for the bankrupt measure, for protection wea, and extravagatee in all? Yet these are be chief if not the sole issues the convention wi anan. (In the other hand, outside of the con ention, outside of the Lecumpton or Buchanan emocracy, whose exclusive organ the convention, there is a grand body of men, who, with the ration, are preparing to do battle against ame of the constitution and the Union. Is no the place of the Anti Lecempton Democrats of Ken-tucky with that body of patriots rather than with the minions of the President? It seems to us the none can doubt it. They concur heartily in all the leading ideas of the Opposition, and condemn and crat of this city, in his last letter, tells a capi some shape of Democracy, comes the convention of to-day, in the name of the President, to thrust La-comptonism down their throats, after the President himself has faited, in spite of beyonets and blood-abed, to thrust it down the throats of the distracted nd dependent people of Kansus. Free to go-free in capvicate, in feeling, and in honor-putraged, indeed, growly outraged, in all these respects, the Anti-Lacompton flamacrats, it appears to us, are both drawn and driven toward the Opposition by the strongest motives that operate on men.

these influence, especially 1, Mr. President, whose to list it has been to serve in this body more years than any other member now present. Hast we should all be attached to it, that my longer association should attach me to it, is most natural. Mr. President, we cannot quit this chamber without some ident, we cannot quit this chamber without some feeling of sacred sadness. This chamber has been identified in the seen of great events. Here questions of American constitutions and laws have been debated and questions of peace and war have been debated and questions of peace and war have been debated and tention of this assemblage in times just; this was the grand theater upon which these things have been unacted. They give a sort of consecrated otherwise to this ball.

Sir, great men have been the actors here. The illustrations dead that have distinguished this body in times past traturally rise to our view on such an example. I have seen the whole fame is not surpassed, and whose power and ability and patriotiem are not surpassed by anything of Grecian crof Raman name. I have seen Clay and Weight and Clayton fast though not less! mingling together in this hody at one time, and unbing their counsels for the beaufit of their country. They seem to our imagination and sensibilities on such an occasion as the least of their country. They seem to our imagination and sensibilities on such an occasion is a local habitation for their natures. This hall is full the voice of their fedures.

The serior is known to the people of the Southern part of the State and to many else-who have experience and the interests of the industrial arts at heart. We trust, therefore, that avery member of the Association will be present to-day to vote in person, as it is said proxies will not be received. The beautiful grounds upon which our firs are held are an ornament to our city and State; with careful management they may be relieved from delds.
